Dear Mr. Hurtado:

I suppose you are wondering what has happened to your treadmill. I worked like a beaver and got it ready on time. Worked all during my August vacation and had it finished September 14th.

Mr. Heins, The Rockefeller Foundation Purchasing Agent, has been notified two times by mail that it is ready and I asked him to send me shipping instructions. He has not even taken the bother to answer my letters.

In the meantime the crated treadmill is gathering dust in the Watertown Shop, taking up valuable space and certainly not doing you any good. There is also the fact that I have spent a lot of money on this job and want to get my invoice in. (I just came back from the hospital today, having had a major operation. The doctors are very pleased with my progress.)

It is incredible that an institution like the Rockefeller Foundation can treat a "little fellow" this way and I shall think twice before I accept any more orders from them.

Sincerely yours,

Fred J. Christensen
